

META: THE STORY OF ECHO

Echo was a mountain nymph who would talk for hours and hours. Hera, queen of the gods, grew angry at Echo for wasting her time and cursed her so that she could only repeat what was said to her.

At a tall cliff-side, you speak the words that you've learned from previous puzzles. The wind carries your words to Echo, and she repeats them back to you. However, the wind has shifted some of the letters so that what Echo says does not exactly match what you've said.
