

You find yourself in a cornfield, surrounded by walls of corn. A maze of maize, if you will. You're very hungry, and you have a map, but it is so old, it has fallen apart into pieces. (Cut along all dotted lines to make 20 rectangular puzzle pieces. Solve the puzzle as you tape the pieces to the grid on the next page.) You remember that some of the corn stalks are shaped like foods, and you can eat your way through one letter of them, but only if you leave a valid word behind, like eating the I in MAIZE.

To escape this maze, you will really have to _____.
