

ROLL OVER BEETHOVEN

Ludwig probably would be rolling over – in his grave(!) if he ever found out that this one shyster of a tour guide is taking groups to Beethoven’s birthplace... in Grenada instead of Germany!

The Beatles* wanted to trace their musical roots, and so they decided to book a tour that was purported to take customers to the home countries of the world’s great classical composers. Their guide, however, was a complete hack and ended up taking people to ridiculously bogus childhood homes – like, for example, Mendelssohn in Italy and Tchaikovsky in Brazil. Seriously, the Liszt goes on and on!

Below are the eight composers and the eight countries on the tour the Beatles signed up for. You will need to figure out which composer the guide has put in which country.

- No composer is in a country with fewer letters in its name.
- No composer/country combination contains all five vowels.
- No composer is in a country that comes after him alphabetically.
- No composer with repeated letters is in a country with repeated letters.

*The characters in this puzzle set are entirely fictional. Any resemblance to actual musicians past or present is purely coincidental.

Who knows, maybe the guide will have time to squeeze in one more bogus stop!
