The works of Jo Lesser

I am Dr. John Whatsit, and my primary hobby has become writing about the adventures of my good friend, Spareluck Holmes, the famed detective.

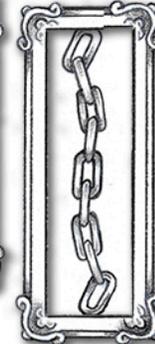

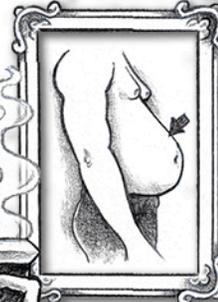

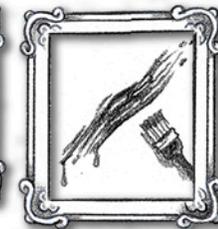

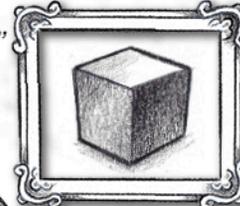

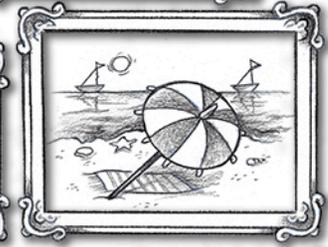

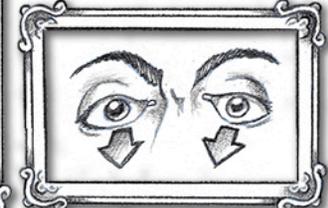

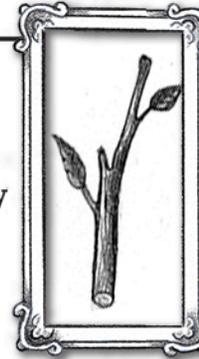

We were investigating a theft at a local gallery displaying the works of two modern artists. The crime was clearly the work of Spareluck's arch nemesis, Professor Morrie Artsy. Oddly, he only stole one painting. I read the show's catalogue of works to Spareluck, "This list indicates the missing work is a painting of a..."

"No need, Whatsit!" Holmes interrupted. "I already know what was in the painting. Professor Morrie Artsy must be testing my powers of observation...but I see through his treachery."

"Holmes, how could you know the image in the stolen painting?" I asked.

"Elementary!" Holmes replied smugly.

The works of Izzie Moore

If you can identify the subject matter of the missing painting, you will have the secret code word needed to find this month's Puzzled Pint! Happy solving!

Spareluck declared Mr. Lesser's paintings "lacked something that Mr. Moore captured in his works." Was Holmes becoming an art critic, or did he see clues that I was missing!?
